

Tim Munro

Collaboration Unplugged

Tim joined GHD in 2006 and has led the establishment of the Procurement Service Line to assist clients in organising their supply relationships so that they deliver value over and above price. He has worked in supply chain management for 30 years including Auckland City Council as Group Manager, Procurement; Freightways as General Manager of their contract logistics division and General Manager Business Development for Linfox in New Zealand. Prior to that Tim had a career in international shipping including general management roles and he is a Fellow and past President of the Chartered Institute of Logistics and Transport in New Zealand.

In developing this paper Tim has also drawn on experience gained through involvement in the development and establishment of supplier agreements covering the full span of Infrastructure activities. These have included multi party framework panels, formal collaborative relationships and contracts aligning consultants, contractors, sub contractors and materials providers to capital programmes.
